Job openings for permanent employees at fresher level will be adversely affected, while temporary or gig workers are better placed due to the overall hiring freeze amid the second wave of COVID-19, a survey said has gone. According to a survey by staffing and HR services company Genius Consultants, more than 57 percent of respondents believe new job positions for permanent employees will have a major impact on the overall recruitment freeze. However, only 43 percent of respondents believe the same is true for temporary or gig workers, it noted.

The survey was conducted online with over 1,000 company leaders and executives across various sectors from May 28 to June 30, 2021.

“At the beginning of the year, India was seeing a steady economic recovery and an upward trend in hiring. But the heavy situation due to the second wave of COVID-19 had a huge impact on the employment rate and recruitment process in the country. Restrictions in mobility This has resulted in job losses in many sectors,” said RP Yadav, CMD Genius Consultants.

Yadav said that temporary or gig workers are better placed than their permanent counterparts due to a range of opportunities available especially in the e-commerce sector. According to the survey, around 69 per cent of the respondents felt that the travel and hospitality sector is the most vulnerable, followed by the manufacturing sector and the media and entertainment industries.

Most of the respondents believe that the overall recruitment scenario is on hold as the country is in the grip of a second wave of COVID-19. In addition, the lockdown and strict restrictions imposed by the states due to the second wave of the pandemic affected many sectors. Yadav, however, said this is a temporary halt and the Indian industry is optimistic about the market recovery by the end of this year.

The survey said that around 51 per cent of the respondents were optimistic about it and about 61 per cent expected to see strong growth in hiring in the private sector.
