Amidst rising economic and employment rate, 73 percent employed in favor of hybrid work model, told these big reasons

The country is slowly returning to normalcy with a reduction in the cases of Kovid-19, rapid vaccination campaign and rising economic and employment rate. In such a survey, it has been revealed that 73 percent of the employees across the industry are in favor of the hybrid model of work. According to a survey by HR solutions provider 'Genius Consultants', more than 73 percent employees said they are in favor of this newly emerging hybrid model across industries.

Most employees in favor of work from home

The survey report said that as most organizations across various industries were forced to make their employees work from home due to pandemic restrictions. Most of the employees said that this arrangement should continue even after the situation becomes normal. In addition, the survey found that the hybrid model would be good and allow employers to continue working in an environment they find feasible.

Save money and time with work from home

According to the survey, "This will save the employees time and money. It will also help companies save office expenses." The online survey was conducted with over 1,000 respondents.

In addition, the survey found that over 71 percent of employees were of the opinion that the hybrid model would have a positive impact on employee productivity and help them be more resourceful.

What is Hybrid Work Model

It is noteworthy that the hybrid work model is a scheme in which the 'schedule' of the employee includes a mix of working from the office and working from outside. Employees have options, which they can choose according to their convenience. Employees can choose when they want to work from home and when they want to work in the office.
